ASBESTOS AND ITS USES.

A Queer Mineral That Serves Not a Few Uses.

"Here is a mineral that is never washed and yet is always kept clean," said a chemist to a reporter, handing to him at the same time what appeared to be the eye and touch to be nothing more nor less than an ordinary piece of coarse cotton toweling.

"What sort of laundry do you send it to?" was the natural query.

"This kind," replied the man of science, "is used by the corner of his laboratory and stuffing the towel into a small stove that was burning brightly there for chemical purposes."

"I understand," said the visitor. "You never use such a towel more than once."

"You are very much mistaken there," responded the chemist. "I use such towels almost forever and they almost never wear out."

With that he lifted off the lid of the stove again and took out the towel with the tongs, dipping it in cold water, and then handing it once more to the newspaper man.

"Why," exclaimed the latter, "it is not even injured! What is made of it?"

"It is made of rock," answered the chemist, "but a very peculiar kind of rock—so peculiar, indeed, that the ancients supposed the stuff of which this towel is woven to be of a vegetable nature. They used to wrap bodies that were to be burned in cloths made of the same fine like substance in order to keep the ashes from being lost among the charred wood of the funeral pyre."

"But what is it called?"

"You have often heard of it under the name of 'asbestos,' though very few people apparently have any notion as to what it really is. It is a mineral deposit of the kind known as 'silica,' and is found in a very hard rock called hornblende, and is found in strata of a fibrous consistency readily divisible into silky strands resembling flax. The likeness has given it the name of 'asbestos.' You can see for yourself from this towel how much it looks like a vegetable fabric when woven. An asbestos towel may be used for pretty nearly the same purposes as an ordinary towel, and, when it is dirty, all you have to do is to throw it into the fire and make it out after a little while perfectly clean."

"Is asbestos used for any other purposes in these days?"

"Oh, yes. It is employed for roofing material, boiler felling, paper stock and in the mixing of fireproof paints for stage scenery. Also clothes for firemen and gloves to handle hot iron with are made of it. Sometimes the mineral is found in thin sheets of interlarded fibers, known as 'mountain leather.' Elsewhere it is not infrequently procured in thick sheets, and in that condition is called 'mountain cork.'"

Dragon Trees.

The vegetable and plant life on the Canary Islands has no so luxuriant a growth as that which is found on the Madeira. Nevertheless there is a great variety of interesting plants which well repay the attention of botanists, and some parts of the islands are beautiful gardens.

Of all the botanical wonders which can be seen there the one which is perhaps most worthy of special mention is the dragon tree (dracena draco). Alexander von Humboldt was the first one to direct attention to this gigantic tree.

The example of this kind of tree which was measured by him was in the garden region of Oronoe, on the northern coast of the island of Tenerife, and had a trunk circumference of seventy-two feet. Humboldt reckoned its age to be ten thousand years, but the latest critical researches prove that he placed the figure much too high.

The next largest tree of this species which is known today is the tree of food of the Rio de los Rios, on the western coast of Tenerife.

This tree was carefully measured in 1867, and again in 1887. The first time the circumference of the trunk, at the height of a little less than three feet from the ground, was found to be nine and one-half inches; twenty-seven years later it was eleven inches, seventy centimeters, more than thirty-eight feet. The tree, therefore, has been proved to increase in size much more rapidly than Humboldt supposed.

The top of this tree is of thick clustered sword-shaped leaves on rather soft, pliable branches, and spreads out in a very picturesque manner. —Youth's Companion.

A Point for Persons Going Abroad.

The other day I went down to see a friend off for Europe. I found him waiting the deck of the steamer with a small black morocco bound book in his hand, on each cover of which was stamped prominently a large gold cross. As my friend's religious belief is rather of a negative than positive character I was somewhat surprised to see him with such a book in his hand, and doubtless expressed my surprise in my book. "He'll be," he exclaimed, as he caught my eye, "it's a great scheme, my boy. I've opened his book and I saw that it was a copy of Baedeker's 'Central Italy.' You see," he continued, "this is a travel book, it is an advertisement to the guides and hotel people and shopkeepers all over Europe that his holder is a tourist, and consequently the fellow who carries it around with him is assured at every step. I had this copy—which I can apply to any volume of Baedeker—made for me the last time I was abroad, and it saved me a lot of annoyance. With it I have walked into scores of churches as a legitimate worshiper where, otherwise, I should have been tossed by guides, beggars and door openers at every step." —New York Star.

"Thick and Glossy."

THE PRODUCTION of an abundant growth of hair, of a silk-like texture and of the original color, often results from the use, by those who have become bald or gray, of Ayer's Hair Vigor.

"I was rapidly becoming gray and bald, but after using two or three bottles of Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair grew thick and glossy and the original color was restored." —M. Aldrich, Kansas City, Mo.

A trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me of its merits. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be abundant and glossy, but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance." —H. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past four or five years and find it a most satisfactory dressing for the hair. It is all that I could desire, being harmless, causing the hair to retain its natural color, and requiring but a small quantity to render the hair easy to arrange." —Mrs. M. A. Bailey, 9 Charles st., Haverhill, Mass.

The Edible Banana.

The edible banana, it is said, is known to seed only to one small spot on earth, the Andaman Islands. However this may be, it is universally grown from suckers. Its cultivation in the West Indies has vastly increased during the past fifteen years, owing to the demands of the United States for its cheap, wholesome and luscious fruit. About 400 or 500 trees are planted to the acre, and the plantations are called "banana walks." The tree fruits the first year, explains Garden and Forest, and the expense of cultivation is so small that a bunch of bananas delivered at the sea coast need have cost its owner no more than four or five cents, while it may be sold in the winter months for from twelve to eighteen cents, and in the spring months for four times as much. There are risks attending banana cultivation, however, for the tropical necrosis often seriously decreases the value of a crop, and it may be entirely swept away in a single hour by a hurricane.

The Work Performed by a Watch.

Horological Review tells how a skillful watchmaker one day thus reasoned with a customer. "You complain," he said, "that your watch gains a minute a month. Well, then, you will congratulate yourself after you have heard me. You are aware that in your watch the balance, which is the regulator, makes five oscillations every second, which is 420,000 a day, so that your watch, exposed to all the vicissitudes which heat and cold occasion it, the varying weight of the air and the shaking to which it is subjected, has not varied more than one minute in a month, or two seconds a day. It has only acquired with each vibration of the balance a variation of the 216,000th part of one second. Judge, then, what must be the extreme perfection of the mechanism of this watch!"

"When You Have a Good Thing Take It."

A writer in a western mining journal says that a standard subject of discussion in mining camps is the opportunities that have been missed by those among its denizens who made great strikes, but failed to realize them, and he states that "when you have a good thing take it" is developing into a proverb among miners. He gives several instances in illustration of his point, and among them is that of a New Mexico miner who held $200,000 mining stock based upon properties in a district that is now practically unknown. The excitement at the time referred to, however, was at red heat. The miner was offered $40,000 for his wealth of paper, but he passed. He sold out ten years afterward for $300 and then made a first class trade. In those days, moreover, mining exchanges were more reputable than they are now.

He Kats Ice.

The son of a rich German-American banker constantly carries about with him a little tin box which many believe contains candy, but which really contains cracked ice. The young man enters the box in the cars or at the theatre or wherever he happens to be. He has some stomachic trouble. This liking of ice has come to be a passion, which, being a banker, he is able to gratify. —New York World.

Her Reason.

Only a little did I beg of her. One little kiss of love. Something to help me bear the pain of parting never to meet again. While down on the waving fields of grain Soft shone the stars above.

Faintly trembled the beautiful lids—"Quick! for I must away!" "I cannot," the answer came with a moan; "Though I love you, darling, the truth must be known."

My tiny kisses are all full grown. And a little kiss don't ask, I pray, I will happen my mouth won't be built that way!" —Ovid Let to Judge.

A Bad Quotation.

"I do love you, Mabel. You know it is in the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love." "So it does," No, sir; no lightly spring turns for me! I want the hottest affection that she shows in the autumn, when the theatres and balls commence. Good-by, Mr. Brown." —Harper's Bazar.

Something Unusual.

Miss Frolicsome—I always thought Mr. Slowly very beautiful and retiring, but last night he actually kissed me. Miss Canstique—Dear me! How surprised you must have felt! —Epoch.

The largest room in the world, under one roof and unbroken by pillars, is at St. Petersburg. It is 625 feet long by 150 in breadth, by daylight it is used for military displays, and a battalion can completely maneuver in it; 30,000 wax tapers are required to light it; the roof of this building is a single arch of iron.

BEE SUPERSTITIONS.

Bees, it is said, object to thrive if dishonestly come by; on the contrary, they forth with pine away and die.

The swarming of bees on a piece of dead wood is regarded as a sure sign of death in some districts of England.

In some parts of England the entrance of a bumble bee into a cottage is looked upon as a certain sign of death.

To sell bees for money is considered a most unlucky proceeding, but they may be bartered away and all will go right.

Quarrelsome people, if inclined to live in the country and keep bees, are warned to mend their ways or their hives will soon become deserted.

In France, when the mistress dies, the custom is to tap three on the hive, repeating these words in French: "Little bees, your mistress is dead."

It is a common saying in Hampshire, England, that bees do not succeed at all in storing up honey whenever there are wars abroad. —London Standard.

In some parts of England the bees are not only invited of a death in the family, but their apiaries are doctored with empo and the bees are invited to the funeral.

Informing bees of a death in a family is a custom still practiced in many parts of England. If the necessary formalities were not fully conformed with the bees would certainly take offense and leave their hives, never to return.

In Lithuania, Poland, when the master or the mistress of the house dies, not only the bees, but the live stock generally are supposed to be acquainted with the fact by the rattling of a bunch of keys, and if this were omitted it is thought the stock would die.
